

SOLDIERS OVERSEAS AFTER JULY 11 GET 20 PERCENT INCREASE

Soldiers who served overseas on and after July 11, 1919, including those who have since been discharged, are entitled to collect a 20 percent increase on their entire base pay instead of on their old base pay, according to a decision just rendered by the comptroller of the treasury. To pay these claims it is estimated that $1,800,000 will be required, and that there are between 250,000 and 300,000 men affected.

The ruling will have the effect of increasing the pay of a private on foreign service from $3.00 to $3.60 as heretofore paid during the war period. The beneficiaries under this division are those enlisted men who served in Europe, the Philippine Islands and Alaska on and after July 11 last. The additional pay is as follows:

Those who received	Per mo. more
$3.00 to $4.20	.....$3.00
$4.20 to $5.40	.....2.40
$5.40 to $6.60	.....1.80
$6.60 or more	.....1.20

These rates pertain only to those men who were serving in their first enlistment and did not apply to service in the Canal Zone, Panama, Porto Rico and Hawaii. Men still in the service will have their pay adjusted on the pay rolls.

The office of the director of finance is preparing to pay claims arising under this decision. The comptroller of the treasury to the United States after July 11 last should make application to the director of finance. The comptroller of the treasury, in Washington, D. C., in making claims ex-soldiers should print their name and address, in addition to signing the request, in order that a record may be obtained and to avoid delay in letters being misdirected.

COUNT OF CHURCHES NEARLY COMPLETED

Work of the county survey council is well under way and has been finished in Clinton, Milton, Milton Junction, Evansville, and Edgerton according to announcement made today by J. K. Arnold, secretary of the council. It is hoped to complete the survey by the middle of April. Jamesville and Delet are not included in the county council which comprises only the rural districts, towns, villages, and Edgerton and Evansville.

The purpose of the survey which is part of the inter-church world movement is the getting together of the churches so that they will wholly occupy the territory thus remedying the over-churching and under-churching districts.

The denominations have banded together in this survey. Maps showing each church and the parish boundaries are being made which will be available to the public. While Mr. Arnold says no church will be forced to give up if it happens to be in an over-churching district it is hoped in time that by means of the maps people can be brought to favor the equal distribution of churches.

Surveyors who make up the council are: Rev. A. D. McKay, Clinton, president; J. K. Arnold, Jamesville, secretary; Charles W. Edgerton, Rev. Edgar Van Horn, Milton Junction; Rev. A. M. Drew, Orfordville; Rev. J. E. Clark, Jamesville; Rev. J. S. Evansville; and Rev. W. S. Carr, Milton. Practically all of the ministers in the county are assisting in the work. Mr. Arnold said.

Columbia and Pierce counties have completed their surveys and are the first of the 29 counties to finish the work.

FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

For Girls to Make
Homecraft

FOR EARLY GARDENING
By Carolyn Sherwin Bailey
The successful gardener nowadays is the one who starts early, and who knows how to get results from the back yard. To get busy and make some gardening helps that you will find very useful when the frost is out of the ground.

A strong box will do very well. Draw a diagonal line on each end so that you can saw it down to one-half its height on one side. When you finish you will have sloping sides, and a box that is half as high in front as in the back. Get an old window pane with the glass in it at over this box, and screw it on with a pair of hinges fastened to the taller side of the box. Fill it with rich earth. This will force seedlings like magic.

Garden Markers
Holly wood, or some other soft wood is best for making markers. If you can't get this wood, use strips of smooth, thin lath.

Make the markers at least eight inches long; ten will be better. Paint one end with your jack knife.

Draw a design on the other end,
a plain little head, a flower or four simple petals, a leaf, or any other conventional design, carving this with your knife.

Paint the marker white or green with regular house paint. When it is dry, color the design at the top with oil colors. These markers can also be made plain, and lettered, radish, tomato, nasturtium, and so on.

If you have an eye to art, you will find these markers readily adaptable in the gift shops.

This garden basket, or market basket, and it turns out to be beautiful. Use a fully new, strong basket, and paint it as you like. It can be decorated with green or something else of the garden will be attractive. Tie a bow of ribbon to the handle. You may want to make another for an Easter gift.

REDS ARE NOT RED SAYS WRITER WHO VISITED BOLSHIEVIKI

(By Associated Press.)
Amsterdam, Feb. 14.—About 80 percent of the red army in Russia is not "red" at all, but is neutral, according to the staff correspondent of the Handelsblad, G. Nyrop. He says about 60 percent of the officers are largely drawn from the trained military men of the old upper class, are czarist in inclination.
This leaves only 20 percent of the soldiers and 40 percent of the officers thoroughly attached to the soviet regime.

Nyrop, one of the few neutral observers permitted to visit Moscow and other soviet cities recently, gives much new information regarding conditions there.

He reached soviet Russia through Poland in December and was, he says, not consciously treated by the bolshieviki than by the Poles, though he had been warned that he had incurred disfavor of the bolshieviki
because he revealed in Amsterdam
the plot to finance bolshieviki propaganda through sale of the jewels of the former Russian em-perors.

In general, he observes that "there are two kinds of bolshieviki." The first class, he says, are cranks with a lot of adventure and a great deal of loving their track. These people, he says, are vain, but if one knows how to treat them they are as easy as one's hands. The second class are the true theorists, the adherents of Marx's principles who are serious, meaning people and treat one fairly.

"They either admit you into their country and receive you well or they don't admit you at all," he declares.

Explaining his statement that most of the red army's officers are "czarist," the correspondent declares that because of this they are all in the army have been forced to serve in the bolshieviki forces by various methods, including imprisonment or close surveillance of their families who are held as hostages.

country and receive you well or

CLASH OVER BOUNDARY OF T. R. PARK AIRED

Washington, Feb. 24.—A dispute between the agriculture and interior departments and other interests over boundaries for the proposed Roosevelt National park in the giant redwood district of California, was aired today before the house public lands committee.

Secretaries Meredith and Lane sent letters favoring establishment of the park, but expressing disagreement over boundary lines fixed in the bill of Representative Elston, republican, California. Mr. Meredith objected to inclusion in the park of national forest lands under his department's supervision, which are needed, he said, for timber and grazing purposes and are not necessary to the park's scenic splendors.

Mr. Lane, however, said that the park should include the entire redwood district, and that the boundary lines should be fixed by the commissioners of the public lands.

MAN WOOS LATE A TON
Wilkes-Barre, Eng.—It was the plaint of an attractive young widow in court that she was being annoyed by a married man of between 50 and 60, who wooed her like "a roaring lion." I don't want him, because I have heard that he has a wife and several children," she said. "He lies in wait for me, and when I go home in the dark he springs out from doorways like a lion. If he does not go home with me, he says no one else shall. I can never go home but what he pounces out of my doorway and protests his love for me." A summons was issued for the man.

BUILDING REPAIRS
REVIVE TIME-WORN
ROCK RIVER PROBLEM

Work of reinforcing with concrete several piles which support the Conrad ruins structure which extends half way across Rock river along the north side of Court street bridge was the subject of considerable discussion by engineers at their regular meeting last night. It was the consensus of opinion that the work as now in progress is in the nature of repairing and does not constitute what would be considered work to make the building a permanent affair. The matter was dropped without any action other than advising that the repairs must be limited to nine piers.

The matter was brought up by Ald. V. J. Hill of the Fourth who explained he had made a personal investigation of conditions there yesterday afternoon at the recommendation of Mayor Welsh. Philip Doehny, Jr., who is having the work done said he was doing it merely to protect the building from falling in to the river and had no intention of violating any state or national ruling which might declare such repairs as a navigable stream.

He said he was preparing to move in 57 tractors and with the help of local engineers within the next few days and that he questioned the strength of the old wood piles to withstand the strain.

Attorney Roger G. Cunningham told of the extensive amount of litigation which would be required to secure an injunction to have the work halted; that the matter would first have to be taken up with the railroad commission, which would then hold a hearing submitting its findings to the governor who would turn them over to the attorney-general. If he saw fit, the county officials could then prosecute the case in circuit court.

He said it would doubtless involve a heavy expense upon the city with the result always doubtful. He followed this up by telling of the numerous navigation obstruction lawsuits which had been involved and of the conflicting court decisions.

The matter was informally dropped with the understanding that Mr. Doehny might proceed with repairing three more piers only. Six have already been repaired. It was brought out.

Boy of Seven Reads Several Languages Without Schooling

WILKESBARRE, Pa.—Little Peter O'Donnell, aged seven years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank O'Donnell of this city, is startling the educators and prominent men of this city by his uncanny ability to read almost any language though he has never attended school and has not had the instruction of tutors. No one can understand the youthful prodigy and leading physicians and students of children's habits are baffled.

The boy was the guest of honor of Kiwanis club meeting recently and well known professional and business men crowded Hotel Sterling to see the little lad perform.

Little Peter, who is a native of Ireland, gathered around him as he does not seem to realize that he is unnaturally gifted. He wasn't bashful or afraid and when a newspaper was given him he easily read it. Then the newspaper was turned upside down and the young man read the words and the young man read the words and the young man read the words.

A few days ago Peter accompanied his father to a nearby store and when a salesman presented his card to the merchant, the latter said he could not pronounce the name. The salesman said that not one in a hundred pronounced his name properly. Mr. O'Donnell asked for the card, handed it to little Peter and the salesman was greatly astonished to learn that the seven-year-old lad is "quite in a hundred."

Apart from his unusual gift, which cannot be explained, the boy is normal. He appears to be a shy, modest little chap, so unobtrusive and retiring that his power to read anything placed in his hands becomes the more astonishing. He has not been spoiled by the interest he is arousing and his parents are making no effort to force him to any feats of prodigy but are permitting him to develop naturally and enjoy all the emotions and pleasures of childhood unhampered by any rules or restrictions.

The lad first started to read soon after he was able to walk. His parents purchased a set of lettered blocks for him on a Christmas day and a few weeks later were surprised to note that he could name the letters. Then they found him setting the blocks together to spell words and were astonished to find that he could pronounce the words correctly.

He was not forced, but picked up newspapers and books and read them fluently. His parents feared that reading was too great a strain on his mind but he managed to find reading matter and even in the street cars he was continually reading the advertising cards.

The boy's attention now seems to be turning towards mathematics and though he has not been tutored he does well with figures.

THE GIRL WE HAVE WITH US.

She has come to be a part of the life of Janesville. She has a home, parents, family ties she has severed, to be one of us and work here in our offices and our industries.

What are we doing for her? What is she going to do with the eight hours or so when she is not sleeping or working?

Stay in the four walls of her room? Well, it happens she is an American trained girl; she has red blood and rosy cheeks; she is full of life and vigor and vitality. All her life she has been out of doors, visited freely, had something to do. At home there has been the family circle, the home restraint, little tasks for herself and her people—all now removed. She will not stay in that room and no one expects her to.

She may go to a moving picture show. She may go to church on Sunday, or she may go some other time when the church is open.

That isn't very much, is it, for a big, busy city to do for her?

What profitless all the preaching and teaching, codes of morals and old iron-clad rules, when we do so little for her? Somehow we have always been trying to save the boy. We have sung songs about him and built buildings for him and looked after his welfare. But his sister comes here and we forget her.

We need a regular Girltown place—not a "Home" and all the semi-prison rules that usually go with "Homes," but a place where she can go in the evening, swim and exercise, play the piano or listen to the phonograph, play like a normal human being, and then go to her room, no matter how small or uninviting, with a new song in her heart.

Let us have a meeting of all the active women in the city and talk over this matter. If they cannot solve the matter we can call a meeting with father. He knows.

We want to make Janesville attractive for the army of girls and boys who will come, are coming, here to seek and get employment. Let us be prepared to answer the question of the anxious father and mother which they will put to Janesville: "What will you do for my girl?"

GEN. WOOD ON TEACHERS.

In his Yankton speech today Gen. Wood emphasized the need for better salaries for teachers and better teaching. "When our children go out from the schools and colleges they want to have more than a mere superficial knowledge of many things, so let us teach a little more of these basic, homely principles, and let us try to drive home, too, something more in the way of information as to what our government stands for, how it is run, how it is operated, what the Constitution means, what is meant by the Constitutional guarantee." But this cannot be done by merely sending half-trained teachers to lay the foundations of citizenship and educate the youth for life tasks. At the meeting of the Inland Daily Association last week Peter Mortenson, superintendent of schools of Chicago, emphasized the need for a department of education headed by a cabinet officer, together with an appropriation to carry on work needed for making American citizens. We appropriate money for creeks and ditches, for surveys and buildings, but we give very little toward national management of education. There is a bureau of education connected with the interior department, but that is more concerned with statistics than with teaching.

The teaching profession must be accepted as the one most necessary for this republic. Gen. Wood has seen the vital truth. Others have preached it. It is time to recognize it as of so great importance as to make it a part of the government's greatest activities and worthy of a departmental existence by itself.

THE WAR OF THE MOONSHINE.

For two days it would appear that the Blue Ridge mountains had been transferred to the Upper Peninsula of Michigan. Here we have had all the picturesque features of the moonshiner and the illicit whiskey runner. Kentucky came to Michigan, the moonshine of the hills became the red liquor of the lumberjack and the miner. These people require hard stuff; nothing goes there unless the liquid is strong enough to dissolve an axe bit. Ever since Michigan went dry one of the leading industries in Wisconsin has been the supplying of thirst-stoppers for the dry sections. Northern Wisconsin has bravely established the making of moonshine and its dispensing. It may be said to have gone from the stage of mere infancy to a regular established fact.

But there is no war in the peninsula. It would appear some of the red-blooded cant-hook artists and iron diggers up there. Troops were called. The country was much stirred. Children read again of the Whiskey Rebellion back in the days of Washington, and brushed up on its romance.

There are many Italians up in Iron county. They make red wine. They drink it. It is the want of the Italian table d'hôte, neither cheering nor inebriating. And now they are pouring it out in the creeks and it is

THE BOY AND HIS DOG.

A boy and his dog make a glorious pair.
No better friendship is found anywhere.
For they talk and they walk and they run and they play.
And they have their secrets for many a day.
And that boy has a comrade who thinks and who feels.
Who walks down the road with a dog at his heels.

He may go where he will and his dog will be there.
May roam in amuse and his dog will not care.
Faithful hell stay for the slightest command.
And bark with delight at the touch of his hand;
Oh, he owns a treasure which nobody steals.
Who walks down the road with a dog at his heels.

No other can lure him away from his side.
He's proof against riches and station and pride.
Fine dress does not charm him, and flattery's breath
Is lost on the dog, for he's faithful to death;
He sees the great soul which the body conceals.
Oh, it's great to be young with a dog at your heels!

going to waste because they fear its seizure. Shame! With the Michigan Whiskey Rebellion over we may return to the League of Nations in quiet and peace.

HOOVER.

Mr. Hoover is largely in the public eye and mind. It is the most logical thing of the times. He is there because the people have gone far from the old partisanship of the past. Hoover happens to be the one who answers the cry of the people in the wilderness at this moment. Mr. Hoover is now going through the American process of public dissection. Some survive this; most die. No matter whether republican or democrat the people will not stand for a man ready clothed, hand-tailored and picked from the shelf, passed out to them by bosses for a presidential candidate. The great national conventions should follow closely the trend of events. Mr. Hoover probably stands no show of being nominated by the republican convention. It is not likely the democrats will nominate him. But the fact that his name has brought out much popular approval should be a guide and a warning to the delegates to the conventions.

There is more reason, therefore, why the republicans of the state should send an unopposed delegation to Chicago in June. That delegation should be close enough to the people to keep out of machine-made politics and away from machine-made candidates. But it ought to have its hands untied and be free to meet every emergency that will arise in that convention.

The sinless element of the world's teeming millions to the number of 300 are living at Benton Harbor, Mich., known as the House of David. But the sinless ones have a cracking good baseball team. One wonders when the bases are full and the third man strikes out, just what should be said.

The girl need not sing the pathetic ballad entitled "The lips that touch wood alcohol shall never touch mine." They won't.

Mr. Bryan must be given credit for much self-restraint. He has never referred to the "Crime of '73" since he came back to earth at the Jackson Day dinner.

Sheriff Peters of Chicago insists on keeping up his finishing school by giving invitation tickets to all prisoners on his at-home hanging days.

The big thing is not to follow behind in the Greater Janesville, but to keep just a little ahead of it.

Man With the Whistle

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN, Director
Janesville Daily Gazette Information Bureau,
Washington, D. C.

Washington, Feb. 24.—There is a weather beaten little man of 40 in Washington this week, putting on a circus under the auspices of the American Legion. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson is a patroness, and with her in the same capacity are the wives of cabinet members and the wives of the wealthy and socially exclusive of the national capital. Vice President Marshall heads the committee having the entertainment in charge, and the powerful men of the land are associated with him.

This showman's name is John R. Agee, and he is said to be "the fastest man with a whistle" in the world. This phrase is one peculiar to the south end of the circus where the man with the whistle is king. It is the man with the whistle who coordinates the 50 acts that may be going on under the big tent in such a way that each works in perfect time, like the wheels in a watch. It is the man with the whistle who performs the miracle of welding man and beast into a machine of spectacular perfection.

He rides in the buggy that is the ultimate product in the circus game. He rides in the buggy that leads the parade. Later, the same every detail that goes on under the big tent; he runs the show, meeting all of the emergencies of the calling in which the routine of every day is like an expedition on the unknown.

Who has not gone to the circus and worked his nimble wits to exhaustion in an attempt to see the act that was going on in the three rings at once? Who has not marveled that all these difficult feats were individually possible, and that when they were perfectly fitted together? The man with the whistle is responsible.

Yid may have noticed that the whistle, its trill is always heard as a given act draws to its close. That trill is the cue to the act that is to follow in a group of clowns, ready for action. Buck of the curtain performers rush into the just of their glittering apparel. The old circus horses fall into their places as correctly as the members of a crack military company. The hand in the arena speeds up for the finale of the act.

Everything like Clock Work. The eye of the man with the whistle catches every detail of the second blast is blown. This marks the end of the act. It is a thing that must be delicately timed. One performer must give the moment to take applause, their moment of joyful approbation. Nothing must interfere with the march of the performers for the next act are at the alert behind the curtain. The army of clowns is ready to break climorously forth. Every moment after the second whistle, and ahead of the third, is sacred to the performers who are finishing their acts.

Then comes the third blast. The clowns dash forth. It is their business to fill in the gap between acts. The shifting from one act to the other is not to be seen. The observer is to be deceived. The clowns are thrust into the breach. The third blast, also, lets down the barrier to the performers of the next act. Under the screen of diversion thrown up by the clowns, they find their way into the rings, no one sees them until the next act is under way. The audience, and then their acts proceed.

At the National Press club, an Washington, the other day, Agee told the story of his climb to the top in the circus world, a story no less dramatic than that of the fight upward of Lincoln, or Carnegie. His story was a story that illustrates all over again the opportunity for success that is tucked away in every boy under the American flag. It is a success that is within the grasp of every boy, regardless of the calling which he chooses.

Got Job on Farm. At the age of three an orphan boy out for himself, crawled out of a box car in a little town in Kansas, and hurried through an atmosphere that blew down the back door of a farmer where he asked for food and work. The farmer gave him both, and there the boy lived for a year, gradually out the back of a horse-herding cattle.

Then a circus came to Superior, Neb., 20 miles away, and the farmer boys took a day off and rode over. The glamor of it appealed to young Agee as it has to many another lad. He sought out the particular ringling of the seven brothers who ran this show, finding him in conversation with the mayor of Superior, who was an old friend. He asked Ringling if he wanted to hire any men. To be sure the applicant was less than five feet tall, and weighed but 90 pounds. Ringling asked him if he knew where there were any man wanting jobs. Agee said that he was one, that he was a farmer boy who was looking for work. The old mayor spoke up and said that Johnnie was right. He was a horse and was hired.

But he wasn't given a chance to ride. He carried horses for nearly a year. Then, one day, the man who rode the champion jumping horse of the world came to grief. In practice he was riding the horse at a high hurdle and the animal, instead of stopping short, the rider went on and landed hard on his head. Ringling himself was hurt and he walked out of the tent and has never been heard of since.

Ringling Jumping Horse. The day after the accident, in an hour, and Agee volunteered to ride the jumping horse. He made good and so started that phase of his career. He rode the champion jumping horse of the world came to grief. In practice he was riding the horse at a high hurdle and the animal, instead of stopping short, the rider went on and landed hard on his head. Ringling himself was hurt and he walked out of the tent and has never been heard of since.

But while young Agee was working as a "horseback," his name applied to the stable hands because they put rosin on the backs of the horses to keep the feet of the bareback riders from slipping. He was given the ambition to become a trapeze performer—and he was practicing. So, when a member of a certain act failed to show up for work, the youthful Agee volunteered, and again made good. Thus another phase of circus work was mastered.

Then there came a stretch of several years spent in the habitations of a clown, after that he worked as an animal trainer, and finally assumed the big job of the man with the whistle.

Last year the big circus of Barnum & Bailey, and the equally large organization of Ringling Brothers, were combined into one show. Ringling took over the task of supervising the combined show. John R. Agee was given the whistle. He had been 26 years on the journey upward, but he had worked all the way and fairly won his place. During last season the combined circus played Superior, Nebraska. Old man Ringling hunted up his ancient friend, the mayor. He took Agee with him and asked the white-bearded patriarch if he remembered this boy. The mayor did not, but was told that this was John R. Agee, whom, 26 years before, he had recommended as a right likely boy, and who was now one of the kings of the circus world.

PERSONETTE

JOHN HALL WHEELLOCK

A poet who is also a good business man isn't such an anomaly if his poetry is bad enough to be ground out in great, jingling quantities and sold by the pound. But John Hall Wheellock is a good business man whose poetry is good with joy by other poets, than which no higher compliment to its artistic value could be paid. In spite of its rare aesthetic charm it has such a general appeal that its writer's name is known to most readers of magazines, from Scribner's, Harper's and The Century to such exorbitantly highbrow publications as The Dial, Poetry, et cetera. His now famous "Earth" received the place of honor in Braithwaite's 1917 Anthology of Magazine Verse, and his fourth book, "Dust and Light," is just going into its second printing. Yet this obviously temperamental and artistic person, as manager of the sales department of a large New York publishing house, has sold a million dollars worth of books in a few years. "Too much stress is laid upon poets being impractical and unburdened creatures," said Mr. Wheellock. "They are dreamers, of course, but it takes a pretty practical person to put his dreams into concrete form. The average human tries to satisfy the vague reaching out for beauty, which all feel, by cabarets, theaters, excitement, and in the end he has nothing to show for it but satiety. The artist, to be poet, musician, or painter, materializes his soul's gesture after beauty, and as a result knows the greatest happiness that life can offer, besides offering happiness to others by his work. Why, hang it all," said Mr. Wheellock, "warming up to his subject, 'now that I think of it, I believe artists are the only practical people in the world. They are the only people who really make their dreams come true." Mr. Wheellock likes to swim, and composes much of his poetry while he is swimming. The rhythm of the waves gets into his metre probably. He has a unique way of working. No matter how long a poem he is writing, he never puts a word of it on paper until it is completed in his mind. It sometimes takes him a week to finish it and he often has as many as 17 or 18 versions of it in his mind, to choose from before he shows it down. And he knows every poem in all his four books by heart. You would think they would crowd out all the business problems and statistics, and all the facts and things he learned at Harvard. But they don't.

Why a movie censorship? Many of the pictures are censored to a point of inanity now.

WHO'S WHO in the Daily News

ROBERT LANSING
The resignation of Robert Lansing as secretary of state in President Wilson's cabinet marks the withdrawal from public life of an official long considered one of the foremost authorities on international law. He has represented the United States before several international tribunals in the adjustment of treaty differences and dissensions.

His first opportunity to act as counsel for the United States government came in 1892 when he appeared as associate counsel in the Behring sea arbitration case.

Following this Mr. Lansing was appointed American representative in the Behring sea claims commission in 1893, and continued to act in a legal and advisory capacity for the government until he relinquished his duties as a member of the Hague arbitration in 1913.

On April 4, 1914, he was appointed secretary for the department of state and was appointed secretary of state following the resignation of William Jennings Bryan, June 9, 1915.

While the United States was passing through one of the stormiest periods of her diplomatic career Mr. Lansing was counselor of the state department and was frequently consulted by the president and Mr. Bryan on points of international law relative to the submarine policy of the imperial German government.

The tense diplomatic relations existing between the American government and Germany were brought to the breaking point when Mr. Bryan refused to sign the note of protest which this government directed to Germany.

The difference of opinion between the president and Mr. Bryan resulted in his withdrawal from the cabinet and Lansing's appointment as secretary of state. Through his long career as a diplomat and statesman Mr. Lansing has enjoyed the distinction of being the foremost authority in international law.

The problem of disseminating the principles of international law, which he followed a few months later by the formation of the American Society of International Law. Upon the founding of the American Journal of International Law, a year later, he became an editor, and has from time to time, as a contributor, permitted being in the publication of his name as an international law authority spread to foreign countries.

Lansing was born in Watertown, New York, on Oct. 17, 1854, of very distinguished parentage. He entered Annapolis college and was awarded his degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1880, and was admitted to the bar of New York in 1883.

In 1890 he married Miss Eleanor Foster, daughter of John W. Foster, a former secretary of state in the cabinet of President Harrison in 1892-3.

WHY MIKE BRADY IS KING OF THE CADDIES
New York.—For some time past Mike Brady, one of the best of the home bred golf professionals in this country, has been known as "King" Brady. Just why this is so, few realize; but here's how the story goes. Back in the early days when Tom McNamee, former metropolitan champion, was professional at the Commonwealth Country club, Mike Brady and George Bowden were caddies there. Mike was the leader of the bar toters, and one day a member referred to him as the "king of the caddies." The name has stuck to him ever since. Brady, incidentally, deserved the name from a financial standpoint, as he had the bull retrieving privilege at the pond and used to make a pretty good penny fishing out the topped and sicked balls. When Mike wanted an afternoon off he used to give Bowden 50 cents for "subbing" in his place. Brady later succeeded, McNamee as "pro" at Commonwealth.
